VICTORY VISIT™ SUMMARY

What happened during the visit?

☒ VictoryVisit Package Delivered

☒ Snack Drop Count - 8

Notes: The manager came out to greet me, and I personally handed over your note. During our brief conversation, I asked whether they were happy with their current IT provider. The manager replied, "Mostly."

I responded by saying, "That's great. Please keep us in mind if you'd ever like a second opinion or need assistance during an emergency." The manager said they would.

Since this was an unannounced visit, I noted that I didn't want to take up any more of their time. Before leaving, I dropped off treats for the team as a small thank-you for their attention and consideration. Outcome: Positive interaction. Message delivered directly to the decision-maker. Future discussions were welcomed if circumstances change or an additional IT resource is needed.

ENGAGEMENT LEVEL

☒ Very Receptive ☐ Receptive ☐ Neutral ☐ Not Interested ☐ Unable to Engage

Notes As I was departing, several team members expressed appreciation for the treats that were left for the office. I also observed the decision-maker reviewing the trifold brochure, indicating that the materials were receiving immediate attention. Overall, the interaction was positive, and the visit helped create a friendly and memorable impression.

Existing IT Relationship

☐ Existing MSP ☐ Internal IT ☐ Hybrid Environment ☐ Unknown

MSP Identified (if known) While the office manager was locating the doctor, I asked who currently handled their IT services. The office manager explained that a friend of the doctor provides their IT support, but they are beginning to outgrow that individual's capabilities.

I replied that we often work alongside existing IT contacts and can provide the additional expertise, resources, and support that growing organizations need, allowing the doctor to maintain that trusted relationship while ensuring their technology needs are fully covered. The office manager responded positively to the idea and appeared receptive to the conversation.

One-Sentence Summary

I also mentioned that you would be available for a discovery call at their convenience and that you would be sending a brief introductory email. They were receptive to that approach and understood that the purpose of the outreach was simply to establish a connection and be available as a resource should the need arise in the future.

FOLLOW-UP RECOMMENDATION

Recommended Follow-Up Sequence

Within 2 Business Days

- ☒ Personal Email – Leverage VictoryVisit Report
- ☒ SDR Follow-Up Call
- ☒ Executive Outreach (introduce yourself call)
- ☒ LinkedIn Connection Request
- ☐ Ask for Discovery Meeting or Onsite Meeting
- ☒ Future VictoryVisit™ Recommended
- ☐ No Further Action Recommended (Not a Fit)

Additional Comments: It appears we successfully got them thinking about their IT strategy and whether their current support model can continue to meet their needs as the practice grows.

I would recommend sending the introductory email we discussed, followed by a brief phone call to establish a personal connection and gauge interest. If the opportunity has not progressed within three to four weeks, a follow-up Victory Visit would be worthwhile to reinforce the relationship, maintain visibility, and continue building familiarity with your organization.

Based on the conversations during the visit, there may be an opportunity to position your services as a complementary resource that can support their existing IT provider as their technology requirements expand.

Notes:

ADVOCATE'S SUMMATION PAGE

This was a very successful and compelling Victory Visit. I received significantly more attention and engagement from the staff and decision-makers than is typical during an unannounced visit.

My sense is that they do not receive many in-person, unscheduled business visits, which worked to our advantage. Rather than appearing annoyed by the surprise visit, the team seemed receptive to the interaction and appreciative of the personal approach.

The visit generated meaningful conversations about their current IT situation, introduced your organization in a professional and memorable way, and created a level of awareness that did not previously exist.

Recommendation: I recommend another Victory Visit within the next three to four weeks while the interaction is still fresh in their minds. This follow-up visit will help maintain the visibility and attention we have established. After that, a visit every other month would be appropriate to continue building familiarity and trust until they are ready to engage or until we determine that further outreach is unlikely to produce additional opportunities.*

At this stage, I believe the account remains very much in play, and consistent, professional follow-up will give us the best chance of converting today's positive impression into a future business relationship.
